

The Tree of Wisdom by Nagarjuna

Bron: <http://oaks.nvg.org/nagarjuna-precepts.html>

Vajrasattva, 'Immutable Being' and 'Consciousness', presides over Great Happiness, and has vast esoteric significance in the Mahayana. Vajrasattva symbolises the Dharma-Kaya, also called Perfect Buddhahood. [Tm 39n; Til 9n, 108-10; Lik 223]

A sexual consort and love-goddess, the succouring, pious Tara (here Visvatara) is "She of the Buddha Eye" - a third eye - in Tibetan. Tara represents Wisdom of Yoga, Saving Mercy, and the hidden might called Kundalini. [Tiy 352, 352n]

Su Nü teaches in the Jade Chamber's Secrets that when she who had once been a virgin presses with her feet and opens the jade gate wide, subjected to no violence, she enjoys him greatly. And there is more to learn still. For example, people in other cultures and times were not ashamed of doing such things when their fathers and elder brothers were watching, writes the Chinese Taoist Chen Luan in AD 570. [Kh 89, 95, 115]

One thing leads to another; it is suggested that since proper practice tends to improve one's performance, wisdom may be had by impressive joys. But these things are put aside below. What follows are fruits of wisdom, however hard-won: She-rab Dong-bu (The Tree of Wisdom), is a quite simple ethical treatise by Nagarjuna (Tibetan: Lu-trub], who flourished about 100 BC, and is celebrated as a magnificent Buddhist philosopher.

The work was edited and translated from the Tibetan by W. L. Campbell, and published by the the Calcutta University, Calcutta, in 1919. Only the English translation of the work is presented here. And what is more, the Sanskrit original, Prajnya Danda, appears to be lost.

Parts of the work have often been used and quoted by Tibetan authors.

Many Tibetan gentlemen assisted Campbell, especially Kazi Dawa Samdup, who also translated works edited by the Oxford scholar W. Y. Evans-Wenz.

Preface

The following contains quotations of what W. L. Campbell writes in his preface from 1918:

The Tibetan version was probably made about the 11th century of our era but the exact date has not been determined. It is included in the Ten-gyur, beginning at leaf 165. [...]

In the course of two years spent in Tibet I sought the assistance of monks and laymen in and around Gyantse but only succeeded in finding one elderly scholar who had read the poem. The Abbot of the Palkor Monastery was good enough to make enquiries at Trashi Lhunpo regarding the possible existence of a commentary on this work, but without success. By the courtesy of the Tibetan Trade Agent at Gyantse, Khenchung Lobzang Chungne Lotsawa, the printed text was compared with the xylograph edition forming part of the Ten-gyur collection in the Palkor Monastery and a number of errors detected. [...]

Rai Bahadur Sarat Chandra Das remarked in his preface that the She-rab Dong-bu was "largely quoted by Tibetan authors" but it is hardly quotation in the ordinary sense of the word. Later writers have borrowed many of the sentiments and sometimes entire lines, inserting them in their own compositions. [...]

I mention this here as the works of Nagarjuna appear to have been not so much the subject of quotation as the source of extensive literary piracies. [...]

The present translation was made at Gyantse, but the number of passages to which no clear meaning could be assigned by the Tibetans was so great that I was in doubt whether it would be possible to proceed with publication, until I came to Gangtok and obtained the invaluable assistance of Kazi Dawa Samdup, Head Master, Bhutia Boarding School. Kazi Dawa Samdup had the advantage of receiving a scholarly explanation of the first 102 verses from a learned Lama Ge-she Kachen Tundrup of Shigatse, who studied the book some years ago and was accordingly able to give the meaning assigned by tradition to some of the passages which appear quite incomprehensible at first sight. [...]

The text remains unchanged. There are a few notes at the back that explain some abbreviations the translator has made use of.

Notes

The footnotes are all rooted in Campbell's footnotes. I have removed some with very little information value, and added next to nothing to those left.

Campbell's list of abbreviations used in his footnotes

The Verses

Evil persons should be brought under control.
The wise should be reverenced.
Fill your treasury with honest deeds
(And) protect your own countrymen.

(As regards) your own secrets and those of others,
If you guard these as your own dear child
He for whom all earthly things are equal
Will make love for man the principal affection.

If your wife is evil and your friend evil,
If the King is evil and your relatives evil,
If your neighbour is evil and the country evil,
(Then) abandon them for a distant (land).

Avoid* that friend who is greedy for wealth.
Avoid a wife who is fond of fornication.
If unskilful in curing and hard to please (or respect)
Avoid such a doctor.

*Avoid or abandon

Although you know the difference between good and bad deeds
You should carry out your work after consultation.
Although you may only succeed partially
Even without succeeding you are to be admired.

The steadfast who speak in few words and politely
Are very much respected by mankind.
As the sun which coming out from the shadow
By his rays creates great heat.

(As regards) these doctrines, though you may suffer
(Yet) be not anxious in your mind.

When the moon has been eclipsed
Will it not shine again?

Just as for the garlands on the altars
Only full-blown flowers are gathered,
So a gardener, in the same way,
Does not uproot the plant.

Rewards and royal favours,
The price of prostitution and praise (from pupil),
The hire of a boat and the rent of a dwelling,
These may be asked for at once
For these six are not to be had after a long interval.

*Selling the lower (part of the body), hence prostitution

A magic spell misunderstood is poison.
Indifference to illness is poison.
An old man keeping company with woman is poison.
A poor man's sleep in the daytime is poison

11

Worthy men who do not make many promises,
But if a promise is made under pressure
Then it is like a carving on stone.
Even should they die it is not altered.

You will come to terms with your enemy on occasion
And on occasion you will quarrel with your friends.
Having learned to distinguish what should be done and what not,
The clever man will always select his opportunity.

If you sin in speech you will be damned.
The parrot, the singing bird and the waterhen,
The silent waterduck which man does not catch—
Their entire accomplishment is keeping silence.

If you keep your weapons in order your enemy will be subdued.
By wearing poor clothes a woman will be subdued.
By treatment illness will be subdued.
Ignorance will be subdued (overcome) by effort.

Keep your resolves to yourself as a secret,
Like the body which lies (hid) in the mud.
If it were not that the sprouts attract attention
Who would find the lotus root?

Although it may become perceptible
Still a non-existent substance (reality) will not be mentioned.
How could the peacock in the painting eat the jewels?*

*This refers to the story of a man who was threading pearls in a room on the wall of which there was a painting of a peacock. The peacock came out of the picture and swallowed the pearls but no one would believe his story (D.S.).

17

If anyone plans in his mind to do evil
He always uses pleasant words to the other.
When the hunter sees the game to be killed
He sings a sweet song to please it.

*The Tibetans say that this is still done by hunters.

Whatever your thought (or opinion) may be
It should be clearly impressed on all men's minds.
They are thus brought under your control,
As by the wish-granting gem.

*The wishing gem is Ge-she in Tibetan.

It is easy to live by carrying the loads of others.
It is easy to dress in tree-bark in the forest.
It is easier for men to die
Than to spend their days in quarrelling.

20

The root-principle of mankind is not to quarrel.

What would you do with wealth obtained by quarrelling?
What would you do with wealth and life
Obtained by pride and the suppression of good.*

*D.S. prefers "Pride and violence".

21

He who undertakes work which he cannot carry out,
Who vies with the multitude and disputes with the powerful,
Who lets a woman know his thoughts—
The four gods of death sit at his door.

*I.e., he is risking his life.

22

Regard not an evil prince.
Regard not deceitful relatives.
Regard not a lustful woman.
Regard not a great sinner.

*The Ge-she Ka-chen Töndrup says that this is read to mean "May I not see" etc.

23

He who can go anywhere
Why should he be injured through his attachment to his own native land?
The evil man says "it is my own well"
And saying thus, drinks the brackish water.

A highly learned man
Has two (forms of) felicity.
Either he will abandon all earthly interests
Or else has much which could be abandoned.*

*The last two lines are obscure. They are compressed into one line in the S.C.D. edition but now stand as given in the P.T.

25

He whose glory has left him (and)
Whose efforts have become meaningless,
When a holy man becomes impoverished (in this way)
He is unhappy except in a forest.

*He prefers the life of a hermit.

26

The career of a holy man is of two kinds.
Like a flower waving its head
Which is either honoured by all in the world
Or else disappears alone in the forest.

27

Life, which perishes naturally in a moment,
Has this as its essence.
As your actions and intellect are undeveloped
Remain modest in society.

*The last two lines are obscure. The translation given above is my own . . . The Ge-she considers that the text is corrupt and proposes to alter the third line . . . and translate these lines as:

Exhaustion, subtraction and want of development.
(Therefore) remain in forgetfulness in the midst of it all.

[As for he term that] is now used colloquially to mean forgetfulness . . . I am inclined to think that it must be taken to mean 'modest' here.

An anthill increases by accumulation.
Similarly eye-medicine is used up by distribution.
The to-be-feared grows less by association.
That is the thing to understand.

29

The anthill and honey,
The waxing moon, up to the full,
The possessions of kings and beggars
Increase by gradual accumulation.

30

Do not be excessively covetous.
Great greed entails punishment.
If you are stultified by excessive covetousness
You are like the fox that was killed by the bow.*

*A fox in a story bit the bow string and was killed by the poisoned arrow.

31

He who always pursues the man who can do something for him
And pays no heed to the man who has done something

Is like the wicked man whose ear was filled with curds.
Such a one has stolen that which was guarded.†
[O, Karna, evil-minded like curdled milk,
You have conquered what you should have protected]

*The two last lines of this verse are very obscure. They are possibly a reference to some story. The Ge she's explanation is to the effect that the curds are a reference to churning, and that the lines mean that a man who churns pays no heed to the butter already produced, but thinks of the butter to come.

Do not go (in search of) excessive fame.
Judge honestly for yourself.
By the fall of the 'bel' fruit into the water
See, the forest was deserted.*

*This refers to a story of Sanskrit origin. The noise caused by the fall of the 'bel' fruit frightened the smaller animals who communicated their fear to the larger, thus causing the forest to be deserted. Or view a fairy tale about it here [Link]

33

Do not say things which hurt the feelings (of others).
Do not speak in a very injurious way.
The good man and the armed
Enemy become known.

34

Even if the son of his enemy speaks sweetly
The wise man is not indifferent.†
As a poisonous leaf is extremely potent (irresistible)
It will cause injury at any time.

*I.e. he remains on his guard.

35

Whosoever does benefit to his enemy
With straightforward intention,
By so doing all enemies will arrive at
The state of folding their hands in devotion.

In desiring to injure your enemy
Praise his inherent good qualities.
What do evil thoughts of injury do?
They injure you and not your enemy.

37

Be firm with the unruly, not with mildness
But with suitable harshness.
If the children are not diligent*
Does not the beneficent father threaten punishment?

*One should read 'clever or pushing', Campbell says.

38

As long as you watch the 'way,'
As long as your steps are steady,
As long as your wisdom is unimpaired,
So long is there profit for you.

If you are always seeking your own advantage
What is the use of remaining among the multitude?
There exists no means whatever for Making all beings rejoice exceedingly.

*i.e. whatever you do you cannot please everybody.

40

To seek from others and yet wish for good food,
To spend your life in begging and yet have great pride,
To be ignorant of literary works and yet wish to dispute,—
These three make you ridiculous to others.

The fire which burned the forest
Became the companion of the wind,
And that same extinguished the fire.
So has the weak man no friends.

42

Not doing harm to others,
Not bowing down to low people,
Not abandoning the path of virtue,—
These are small (points) but (really) very many.*

43

Having no fear of disease,
Endeavouring to associate with the holy,

Not using the (vulgar) language of the mean,—
A day (spent thus) is greater than a hundred years.

Whenever the mean find a little wealth
They despise everybody and are filled with pride.
But the virtuous, although they may attain the possession of wealth,
Remain bowed like ripe rice.

45

Low class creatures,
Should they become possessed of wealth or science,
Think only of quarrelling with everybody
Like the fox with the blue skin.*

*Refers to the story of the fox who fell into a vat of indigo and then said he was a tiger. (D.S.)

46

If they become possessed of wealth or learning
Low people become proud.
But even when doubly honoured
The wise man will become the more humble.

47

Trade without profit, quarrelling with those who have a following,
Despising to beg (and thus) poor, delighting in lust,
Using rough language to young women,—
These five are improper conduct in a man.

The peacock, although scorched by heat in summer,
Would rather hope for rain from the middle of the sky
Than bend its proud neck to the bad water of the dirty pond.

The ti-ti-ra bird preserves its own life (somehow) with dew drops,
For it fears to be placed under an obligation by begging
And will not even beg from Indra.

If you understand Real Truth, why have a teacher?
When the disease is cured, what is the use of the doctor?

When the water is crossed, what (use) is the boatman?
What use is a sorcerer to a man without passions?*

*A difficult line. Might be rendered: What is the use of a familiar spirit. to an ascetic?

51

As long as an evil man is weak
So long is he naturally good,
(Like) the waters of a river in autumn
Which can be easily crossed by everyone.

52

Where store is made by the mouse,
Where the cat guards the butter,
And the crow is the director of ceremonies—
How could reliance be placed in such an arrangement?*

*This is obviously an allusion to some story but the reference has not been traced.

If there is much discussion about anything
All make boast of their skill,
And as all wish to be placed foremost
That gathering is brought to naught.

Copulation by day and sleeping by day,
Fresh beer, curds and young people drinking,
Sleeping with withered old women,—
These six waste the bodily strength.

55

He whose anger causes no fear,
Who, when pleased, can confer no benefit,
Who can neither destroy nor subjugate—
What avails the anger of such a man?

56

The encounter with the time of misfortune and disease,
A time of famine and danger from enemies,
Being at the king's gate or in Yama's abode,—
These are the common remedy (i.e. affect all alike).

57

(People) strive for worldly things because they want them.
It is not done for the sake of righteousness.
Like the calf which, seeing that the milk is exhausted,
Leaves the cow at a distance.

Separation from the object of affection, the contempt of one's own people,
To be much in debt, association with the evil,
To be abandoned by friends who see your poverty,
These five are not fire yet they burn the body.*

59

He who, when small discords increase,
Does not attempt to make peace,
Is like the bee's honey leaking in drops,
And the ruin of a country.

* Apparently a reference to a story which, however, has not been traced.

60

He who has knowledge is firm.
The holy, even when destitute, do not discard moral virtues,
Although scorched by the sun's natural heat
The natural cold of snow is not taken away.

61

Those who wish to terminate their sins believe in Buddha.
Those who wish to terminate their earthly existences associate with the evil.
Those who wish to terminate their families beget fools and idiots.
When cereals are to be consumed the stomach becomes heated.

Those blinded by desire do not perceive their sin.
The blind man does not see the shape of (things).
The proud do not perceive their faults.
He who regards himself (the egotist) does not perceive Real Truth.

63

A conqueror, a water channel, a creeping plant,
Women and the blind, these five,
How they are led by the crafty!
And this leading places them in the power of others.

64

The misery which follows pleasure
Is the pleasure which follows misery.
The happiness and misery of mankind
Revolve like a wheel.

65

The invincible appears before you
And again becomes invisible.
What is that of yours and what are you?
Who will be miserable on that account?

66

Thus the logs of wood
Which go down together to the great ocean
Are driven apart by every wave.
Who will be miserable on that account?

67

The very wise man conquers rather by forcefulness than by anger.
The evil man fails by being angry.
Oh, evil men, defeated by defeat,
How could you be called to the society of the wise?

68

A big stone, by a great effort,
May be thrown to the top of a hill,
But can be toppled over by a small (effort).
Our own faults and virtues are like this.

69

The man who, with regard to something which is not to be done,
Meddles in the matter
Will surely come to grief,
Like the monkey which turned out the child.*

*Refers to some story which has not been traced.

70

He who has entirely forsaken his own interests
And rejoices in those of the other party
Will surely be destroyed.
How such a man resembles King Rab-mar!

*This reference has not been traced.

71

If an astronomer calculates from the sky
He will ascertain the paths of the moon and the stars;
But in his house the womenfolk are at variance,
And he does not perceive their various misconduct.

The moon's colour was apparent (reflected) in the unsullied water,
And you wished to seize the lotus root.
Oh, swan, who knew how to separate water and milk,
What has become of your knowledge today?*

*This reference has not been traced.

73

Any man who has work, great or small,
And desires to do it,
And in this endeavour does his best,
Is considered to be doing a lion's work.

74

So, in protecting his kingdom
And in overcoming his venturesome rivals,
(A king) should not rely on his subjects
But do it personally in this present life.

75

He who says to himself, 'who is the loved one and who the other,'
Who acts affectionately, magnanimously
And broadmindedly, such a man
Controls the whole earthly globe.

76

By always uttering pleasant speeches
It is easy for a king to beguile his people.
But as regards profitable words, which are like medicine,
The speaker is rarer than the listener.

If you understand the purport of the doctrine
As when the beam is at fault when weighing is done,

Even if it was constructed by a reputed wise man,
It is better to let your own (conviction) be the winner.

78

If he is equal in wealth and ability,
If he knows the essential vital point and is diligent,
A follower of this kind is sure to injure you.
No enemy will injure you as he will.

79

If fire is lighted in water*
How is it to be extinguished?
If the fear comes from the protector
Who is there to protect you from this fear?

*I.e. if water be set on fire.

(A drum) when not adjusted, does not give forth pleasant sounds.
Even when adjusted the sound emitted is not sweet.
The world is like a small drum.
It should be so adjusted as to give forth a melodious sound.

81

The lord of the earth, being influenced by passionate desires, does not discriminate between benefit and injury.
He conducts himself as he pleases, like a lust-maddened elephant.
Tortured by remorse, he falls over the precipice of despondent misery.
He blames those around and is ignorant of his own fault.

In a time of disputes a king, rather than acquire wealth,
Should preserve his life by abandoning property.
Just as when the butcher shears the sheep's fleece
(The sheep thinks) the sparing of its life to be a great gain.

When there is a snake at the root and an eagle above,
Monkeys climbing in the branches and the flowers surrounded by bees,
Where a resting place is provided for all savage animals,
Pay no heed to (beware of) such a sandalwood tree.

By whatever means you control your enemies
It is not the (physical) ability but the method (which matters).
See how the crow with the string of golden beads
Got the snake killed.*

*D. S. explains that the snake lived at the foot of the tree in which the crow lived who owned the beads. The crow wished to kill the snake and accordingly dropped the beads. A passer-by who wished to take the beads killed the snake in order to do so.

85

He who has understanding is mighty.
What can you do with might without understanding?
How strong the lion was,
Yet he was killed by the hare.

*The hare told the lion to look at his reflection in a well, and the lion fell in. One of the few stories referred to in this book which are known in Tibet.

86

If you (want to) have proper method in your work
Consult those possessed of understanding.
What need is there to speak of obtaining health, wealth and happiness?
Even if you fail it will still look well.

87

The conduct of the morally virtuous is self-evident,
But how can it cure evil persons?
Like phlegm (? acidity) which is brought on by hot rough-tasting condiments (their evilness) becomes very much increased.

88

The man against whom you feel anger in your heart
Is not to be admonished by words.
Catch your enemy by the feet and
Then admonish him with the weapon of words.

89

In as far as danger has not been encountered
In so far is danger to be feared.
At the time of real danger
It should be vanquished like a mistake (which is acknowledged).

90

(As regards) one who has imbibed the truth,

Is it clever to impose upon such a man?
When a man is resting on the bamboo*
[When a man is resting in the embraces of a beautiful woman]
What is brave about killing him?

*D. S. prefers to read "bamboo" as bricks, but this meaning of the word appears to be modern. This line may possibly mean "when a brave man is asleep", or the line may be translated "when a man is resting on the greensward."

Even when young, rejoice in the intense tranquillity of the old.
Be not proud of what you know, even when learned.
However great your glory, be forbearing in your manner.
However high you may rise, be not proud.

Those who ever delight to benefit all creatures
Are supreme like the lamp made from a jewel,
Which relies not on oil
Nor on the vessel nor on the wick (for its light).*

*It is believed that certain jewels have the inherent quality of emitting light.

93

A doctor taking food and not digesting it,
A king speaking falsehoods, and
A man of good birth misbehaving himself,
These three are very unbecoming.

94

By association with the exalted,
Who would not become exalted?
The thread on which the flowers are strung as a garland is attached to the head.

95

He who preaches at the timely season
And speaks when opportunity arises
Will be very much remarked
And obtain worldly greatness.

96

He who is possessed of diligence, courage,
Might, wisdom, (the power) to subdue others,

And perseverance, these six virtues,
Is feared even by the gods.

97

(As regards) your former enemy, now defeated,
Trust him not even when he wishes to become your friend.
See how in the cave where the owls were gathered
The raven lit a fire and they were burned.*

*Refers to some story which has not been traced.

Eating, sleeping, fearing and copulating—
Man and the brutes are alike in these.
By the practice of religion mankind is elevated
If religion is not understood, is man not on a level with the brutes?

99

Those who speak ill of religion,
Although they go and come by day,
Are like the smith' s bellows:
They have breath but they are not alive.

100

Leaving the patron, Buddha,
And bowing to other gods,
Is like a fool who comes to the bank of the Ganges
And being thirsty digs a well.

Although you may remain in a country for a very long time
It is absolutely certain that you will have to leave
Whatever may be the difference in the parting.
The actual going cannot be avoided.

102

By compulsory separation excessive pain is infinitely caused to the mind.
But if the giving-up is voluntary
Infinite peaceful happiness will be obtained.

103

One's desire is to be attractive and happy,
And wealth is of course pleasant.

But yet this world of existence
Is like a healthy drunken person being carried.*

*This line is obscure but may mean that the evil and stupid course is preferred.

104

For living beings there is no moral defilement equal to lust.
Nothing injures others as envy does,
None is so fawning as a beggar,
There is no friend or relative to equal generosity.

105

There is no eye like (that of) wisdom,
There is no darkness like spiritual darkness,
There is no enemy like disease,
There is no danger to equal death.

106

Comparing these, the most inexorable
Is death, which will certainly come.
(Therefore) let your mind be turned from desire
And rejoice in the True Religion.

107

It is well to have this friend and that gem. [A]
The wishing gem is real—stones are not gems.
The topaz being treated as the best (of gems),
Such a gem (causes) the ruin of the world. [B]

*[A] Here generosity is the friend, and religion the gem.

[B] This verse was referred to a learned 'incarnation' in Tibet who considered that there was a reference to some story.

108

Whatever there be on the earth's surface, grain,
Gold, cattle and good health,
Not all these will suffice to satisfy one man.
If you understand this you will obtain tranquillity.

Wealth, hoarded with great pains
And fondled (handled) at intervals,
How it resembles the starving mouse (who hoards his store).
Wealth is merely a source of misery.

Earthly life is not stable,
Wealth and enjoyment are not stable,
Wife and child are not abiding,
(Therefore) trust in religion and (good) reputation.

111

A king is not satisfied with great riches,
A clever man is insatiable for elegant sayings,
The ocean is never sated with water,
The world has never enough of the sight of beauty,
Fire is not to be satisfied with wood,
Nor (is it possible) to satisfy a child's desires.*

112

Moral conduct, self-restraint,
And the control of the mind,—
Whoever bears these earnestly in mind
And remains so, then what more does he need?

If you remain utterly contented
You are far from the plane of the evil man.
Pleasures which are bound by the ties of carnal desire
Beget trouble at every step.

114

This so-called body, full of faults,
Has however one great moral quality.
Whatever it encounters in this temporal life
Its movements (depend upon) the steersman (you).

115

The forest elephant is powerful although he lives on grass.
The serpent, although he lives on air, is not lean.
The ascetics who have only a little grass and fruit are not of the past (do not die).
Thus, modesty and contentment are the only objects of attainment.

116

Where is the solitary retreat where there is not
Vegetation and dustless water?

The moon is the public light.
What is the use of (personal) property?

The surest possession is real contentment.
It is not difficult to earn your livelihood, whatever it may be.
(It is like) places where there are grass, leaves and water.
There is no place where these are not (to be found).

118

The tiger is chief of the forest and the elephant is leader.
Make of the grass your seat and your garments of tree-bark,
And have the fruit of the trees for food.
The evil society of poor relations is not (real) life.

119

The man who, either in a good or bad (style),
Adapts himself somehow to what he has
And continues to keep his body (from impurity),
What is the attraction of wealth to him?

120

With the price of great good actions
The ship of your (present) body has been bought.
So long as it is not wrecked,
Strive to cross the ocean of human misery.

121

For so long as the moon of pleasant times is waxing,
And so long as Death, the planet Saturn, does not find you,
So long live chastely
And let your actions be right actions.

122

When your eyes are fixed in unconsciousness
And you have come to your last breath through constant hiccoughing,
As one led in the dark to a great precipice,
Of what assistance can child and wife be then?

123

He who yearns in pity, whose passions are controlled, who rejoices in contentment,
Who is passionless, rejoices at the general happiness, lives in the woods, eats fallen fruits,

Wears bark on his emaciated body, cries 'victor, victor' in the sweetest fashion (to him who)
At Benares triumphed over the power of death, will yet have to discard this mortal body.
Salvation is not (to be found) in believing in religious books not yet in freedom from bodily suffering.*

*This five-line verse is unusually complicated and the only verse in the book with lines of nineteen syllables [. . .]

124

If the thoughts are controlled by wisdom
Then salvation is very near.
To get rid of the contamination of moral faults
What is the use of shaving your head?

125

To him who has no covering for his mind
What is the use of a cotton robe?
He whose mind is imbued with compassion for all sentient beings,
That is (the way of) salvation and divine wisdom.
Ashes and long hair do not constitute the religious robe.

He who is subdued in the prime of life
I know for a really subdued person.*
If all the senses were completely exhausted (i.e. by age)
How could he possibly not be subdued?

*Or disciplined.

127

Over friends and kinred in the burning place
There comes a change when the smoke has dispersed.
As regards that which (always) accompanies you,
If you are convinced that it is your own works, then practise acts of virtue.

*D.S. takes the first two lines to mean that friends and kindred return home after they have seen you burned at the ghat. The translation given above seems nearer the original.

128

Wealth, acquired through great misery
Or by acts contrary to religion,

Or by bending before your enemy,
Such wealth is not proper wealth.*

*Wealth or property in general.

129

The holy man who is very firm in his longing to act nobly
Is always miserable through the fear of being decried in society.
But the shameless man who spreads the root of perverse conduct,
And does not discriminate between the proper and improper is happier on the whole.

130

He who has not the sense to distinguish between the proper and improper,
Who has abandoned all heed and (observance of) vows,
Who only wishes to be filled with good food,
What difference is there between a rich man of this kind and the beasts?

131

The great source of virtues, both visible and invisible, is knowledge.
Therefore, if you are striving to procure them.
Take hold of wisdom in its entirety.

A hero is born among a hundred,
A clever man is found among a thousand,
But the wise hero in a hundred thousand
May be born in a thousand (or not at all).*

*The last two lines are obscure. [A certain Tibetan word in it] might have been rendered as 'a genius' but appears to mean here a man who possesses both courage and learning.

133

By the wise all sciences will be studied even when they are past middle age.
Although there may be no results in this life
It will become easier for them to obtain such in another life.

Even when white-haired and wrinkled
Learning from others should be treasured.
Wherever the man of much learning may go
He will not obtain the aggregate (of learning).

135

A king and an accomplished man—
These two are not alike.
A king is esteemed in his own country,
An accomplished man is esteemed everywhere.

136

Although the accomplished man have faults
Philosophers will not grieve.
Although the moon may become spotted (stained)
The firm look at it with pleasure.

137

There is no bodily ornament like accomplishments,*
There is no (physical) misery like mental worry,
There is no protection for the body like patience,
There is no relative (or friend) to equal charity.

*Accomplishments: or moral virtues, talents, etc. The words [in the Tibetan text] can be rendered in a variety of ways.

138

Although the holy man may live far away
His virtues act as a messenger.
Through sniffing the perfume of the kitaka (flower)
The bees are attracted themselves.

If you are persevering in virtue
What is the use of your haughty attitude?
The cow which has no milk,
Even if a bell be attached to it, will not be purchased.

140

Our existence is short but science is of many kinds.
We may estimate life but we do not know how (long) it will be.
So, like the swan which separates milk from water,
Devote yourself to whatever you undertake.

Although many large stars are gleaming
And the moon too shines as an ornament of the earth, yet

Whenever the sun sets it becomes night.

Except for the sun there is no meaning attached (to the terms) 'east' and 'west'.

142

On whatever it shines

Darkness is dispelled and light produced.

The shining of the sun being supreme

What is there in the shining of the other (bodies)?

143

The man who accomplishes one single act thoroughly

Excels all sentient beings—what need for many (acts)?

As the moon, when full, lights the earth's surface—

A great multitude of stars have not this power.

The growth of moral virtue depends on one's self.

(The acquisition of) property depends on previous merit.

Why blame anybody for this?

145

Moral virtues are to be obtained by making an effort,

And as this effort rests with yourself,

To say that others possess moral virtues—

Who could endure to lead such a life?*

*I.e. without emulating them in endeavour.

146

Of those who understand the meaning of the scriptures

There are many even among the crippled.

It is a matter for rejoicing to find the sharp-pointed sword by which the enemy is conquered.

147

Rich men are to be found even among the barbarians

And there are many heroes among the beasts,

But holy men who can explain the various truths are the rarest of all.

148

There are not sandalwood (trees) on all hills,

Nor does one get pearls from all elephants.

The learned who can explain the meaning of the Real
Are not to be found everywhere.

Real Truth is a virtue to the talented
But a harmful thing to those without talent.
The water of the river is very free from impurity;
But, entering the ocean, it becomes undrinkable.

The cultured delight in culture:
The uncultured find no pleasure in it.
The bee is attracted from the forest by the lotus.
The frogs, although living together, are not thus.

151

The fame of the sagacious
Increases among the sagacious themselves,
As valuables among experts
And heroes in battle.

152

The swan does not look well in an assemblage of hawks,
Nor the horse among the donkeys,
Nor the lion among the foxes,
Nor the clever man among fools.

That which is placed on their heads (i.e. respected) by the great
May be considered (merely as) a basis by the vulgar.
As the 'chorten'* to which the learned bow
Is used as a seat by the crows.

*Sankcrit 'chaitya', a stupa.

Though possessing it themselves unproclaimed
While others have it in small measure,
Holy men delight in such moral virtue.
How remarkable is such conduct!

*I.e. Holy men are ready to praise the lesser accomplishments of others without advertising their own superior accomplishments.

155

The virtues of the omniscient
Are comprehended only by the omniscient.
The exact weight of the earth‡
Is known only to Ta-ye.§

*'measure of lightness'.

[B] Ananta, the serpent-god who supports the globe [in ancient Indian mythology].

156

If people mutually advertise each others' virtues,
Even he who possesses none will acquire them.
But he who proclaims his own virtues,
Even were he Indra, would not be respected.

There where the possession of learning is not respected
Why should the learned man go (thither)?
In the city of the naked Jainast†
What would the washerman do?

*Or those naked, without clothing.

158

Alas, this stupid world
Has not obtained personal independence (i.e. initiaitive),
But following (imitating) the doings of others
Is lost in the vessel of the unobstructed.‡
[Disappears (like a lump of copper) in a vessel of (molten) copper]

*The translation of this line is due to the Ge-she. It appears to mean that worldly people are lost in the round of material things.

159

Of the two, the buffoon and the clever man,
To the fool the laughter-maker is superior.
The buffoon acquires wealth
But the learned man goes empty-handed.

160

By means of various records of profitable meaning
The sage passes his time.
The indigence (consequent on) abandoning religion
May be acquired even in sleeping.

161

He who in an assembly of many persons
Makes no effort to obtain the virtues of the holy,
What is the profit in such a one being born who is driven away by his own mother's pains?*

*D.S. translates the last two lines: He is frightened away by seeing his own mother in pain. What good is he, even if he be born a male.

162

The way of the wise man is knowledge,
The way of the cuckoo is a sweet note,
The way of the ascetic is patience,
The way of a woman is perversity.

*D.S. prefers "folly" here.

163

Astronomy itself and doctrinal principles,
The Eagle-spell and the repeating of spells,
(Of these) the essential meaning should be seized.
Do not analyse the sound (of the words).

Knowledge contained in books
And wealth procured from others,
When the time for needing them arrives,
Are neither knowledge nor wealth.

165

The accomplishments of the teacher of the arts
Are but accomplishments for earning a living,
But the study of the termination of earthly incarnation
Why should that not be the accomplishment?

166

To no man without (due) scrutiny
Should sound advice* be given.
See, how for only giving a place to a monkey
The man was made homeless.

*D. S. prefers 'chosen truths.'

[B] A reference which has not been traced.

167

Some devote themselves to speech (preaching),
Some gain their object without speaking.
The reed-flower has no fruit,
The walnut has both flower and fruit.

168

The fruit of the kataka tree
Clears all water,
But, if its name only be mentioned,
This does not cause the mud in the water to subside.

169

Although a man may be learned in written works,
Yet if he does not apply (what he knows)
(He resembles) the blind man who even with a lamp in his hand cannot see the road.

170

Like the moon which waxes and wanes,
In having recourse to the holy or impious
A little virtue may be increased
Or vast accomplishments may be decreased.

171

It is easier to have a clever man for one's enemy
Than to be friends with the stupid (unlearned).
(As in the stories of) the protection of the Brahmin by a thief
And of the monkey who squeezed the king's eyes.*

*The references have not been traced.

172

The clever, the disciplined,
The contented and the truth-tellers,
It is better for such to die
Than (to live in) the kingdom of the evil.*

*Or Than to share a kingdom with the wicked.

(In the matter of) a snake's venom and that of an evil man,
An evil man is more venomous than a snake,
For the snake's venom may be overcome by drugs and spells
But what can soothe the venom of an evil man?

Although the evil may be benefited by a hundred talents
Yet, even when happy, they use abusive language.
He who is well educated is firm.
Although poor as a faqir he will not abandon virtue.

175

The naturally evil man
Is like the weighing scales—
A little thing sends him up
And a little thing sends him down.

176

Although smeared with sandalwood, musk and camphor
The natural strong smell of garlic is not driven out.
Although many texts may be well studied
One does not drive out the natural evil in one's disposition.

177

There are no lotuses on the face of a holy man's son,
Nor do horns grow on the heads of prostitutes' sons.
But in so far as there was perversion in the act
In so far is that the essential characteristic of the bastard.

The word which is uttered is one thing
And different from the thought in the mind.
Alas, then, for the crooked-minded!
Who can change this natural disposition?

179

He assiduously retains his vices
And ever discards the moral virtues.
In retaining vice and discarding virtue
The evil man resembles a strainer.

180

He who has been refuted by an evil man
Loses confidence even in the holy.
When a child's mouth has been scalded by (hot) milk
He will drink curds only after blowing on them.

181

Seeing the stars' reflection on the lake by night,
The swan is disappointed in taking them for lotus shoots,
So that even when he sees the real lotus shoot by day he will not eat it.
When once refuted by a liar one will doubt even the truthful.

A woman's appetite is twice (that of a man),
Her deceitfulness four times (as much),
Her shame six times,
And her passions eight times—so it is said.

183

Not by gifts nor by attentions,
Not by worship nor by veneration,
Not by (constant) association nor by assiduity,—
By none of these is a woman to be resisted (? controlled).

When he was carried off by the King of the Birds
The White Lotus Serpent God said:
"He who tells secrets to women
"His life is lost there and then."*

185

(By them) one's object and religion are completely destroyed,
They create an obstacle in the attainment of salvation,
They become the cause of all mischief.
Rather therefore avoid other men's womenfolk.

186

If even one written verse (of truth)
Is given by a Lama to his pupil,
The gift given would be supreme.†
Such a thing is not on earth.

*The text of this line appears to be very corrupt. D. S. [suggested the] amended version, on which the translation given has been based.

187

All worldly pleasures should be abandoned,
But, if you are unable to abandon them,

Then cling to the holy.
That is the cure for it.

188

All desires should be abandoned,
But, if you cannot abandon them,
Let your desire be for salvation.
That is the cure for it.

189

The unhelpful relative is like a stranger,
But he who helps, even if he be an outsider, is a relative.
Like the body and its diseases which are with us
And the beneficial medicine of solitude.*

190

If you hold, with assiduity,
A pot half full of water
On your head; so also if respected
The evil man becomes excited (angry).

*This verse is rather elliptical--it is to be inferred that the evil man's excitement is to be compared to the water splashing over.

191

Whatever may be agreeable to your mind,
Although it be far away is yet near.
That which is not kept firmly in mind,
Although by your side is yet afar off.

192

Though we may live in the society of the impious
There is no intimacy like the water and the lotus.
The holy may ever live far apart,
Yet they rejoice like the moon and the water-lily.*

*These two admire each other at a distance.

193

If you are ever desirous of friendship
Then do not do these three:
Laying wagers, money transactions,
And speaking privily with women.

194

When milk is got from a horn,
When the reed-flower drops honey,
Then, when a woman is true,
The lotus will grow in dry ground.

195

A man possessed of very little moral merit,
Even should he obtain abundance, knows not how to enjoy it,
Like a dog on a lake of snow (glacier)
Which, when thirsty, licks with its tongue.

*The dog has not the ability to melt the ice.

196

Those who do work in this world
Would not properly carry provisions for the journey without payment;
But beggars and the poor, without its being evident.
Have a hundredfold profit in the future.*

197

As we have to go, leaving wealth behind,
Therefore men give alms.
As, even if you die your property is not lost,
Realize that giving alms is like (the act) of a (clever) miser (? economist).

198

Hesitating to impoverish themselves by charity,
The miserly do not give alms.
But this (wealth) being the real danger
The learned man distributes his wealth.

199

From your food, why not give about half to the beggars?
The desire and the reward which charity brings
Will be obtained at some time.

*The future adjustment [is] described by the Ge-she as that form of charity which brings its own reward in kind.

200

Although you may get no results from your actions, still do not be grieved,
For you can still give alms from what you possess.

Leaves, flowers, fruit, water and medicines,
All these can ultimately be rendered inimitable by the power of mental dedication.*

*Mental dedication of the reward of a good action to some definite object, such as the salvation of a parent. [It was believed that it is] not the material value of the alms but the spirit in which they are given which matters . . .

201

(As regards wealth) which is devoid of charity and enjoyment (neither given away nor enjoyed),
To be the owner of such wealth is to err.[†]
For although it is your own property
Why are you not the owner (why don't you use it)?

202

Further, this is the place (lit. earth) for action,
The beyond is the place for results.
Whatever may be done here,
That same will certainly be enjoyed there (i.e. the fruit).

203

The wealth, rank, beauty and health of others,
Why be grieved in seeing these here (below)?
If you desire these, is not the getting of the fruits of work from the seed of virtuous action applicable to you too?

204

If you have possessions and do not distribute them,
What is the use of keeping them by you?
The fruit of the kimpaka
May grow, but what is its use in hunger?*

*The kimpaka is described as a pretty but bitter fruit,

205

Whoever gives alms which do not harm others—
His various (resulting) pleasures will neither be carried away by water
Nor burned by fire nor stolen by thieves.
Such possessions will never be utterly destroyed.

206

He who does not try a remedy for the disease of Hell (i.e. of the going to Hell),[†]
When he reaches the place where there is no medicine
What will he do—he and his disease?

207

Holy men are seized by the snake of words which comes from the pit of savage men.
As a means of allaying this poison
Drink the medicine of wisdom and patience.

208

Although you may kill all your life long*
You will not exhaust (the number of) your enemies.
But if your own anger be slain,
That is to slay the real enemy.

209

The mighty are not amenable to reform,
Therefore why exercise patience (with them).
With, those who are disciplined and peaceful in conduct
What necessity is there for patience?

210

If you are merely angry owing to an injury,
Then why not be angry with anger which obviously destroys religious aims and salvation?

211

He who, having seen the excellence of others,
Is afflicted by disturbance in his own mind,
Will not gain even a little of the Truth.
Such a being destroys his own merit.

212

Let all hear this moral maxim,
And having heard it keep it well:
Whatever is not pleasing to yourself
Do not that unto others.

213

As regards the leaving of this mortal life,
Who is not clever in knowing and speaking about it?
But when it comes to practising (what they preach)

Property is unstable, and youth perishes in a moment.

Life is like being ever in the grinning fangs of Death.
Yet (mankind) delays to obtain release from this world.
Alas, the conduct of mankind is very surprising!

215

He who has a good intellect but is lazy,
Such a being will not become exalted.
He is like a youthful writer
Who makes his calculations in the dust.*

*Obscure. I have taken a secondary meaning given in the Dictionnaire Thibetain-Latin-Francais published at Hongkong in 1899.

216

If all these human beings
Could perceive the God of Death on their (own) heads,*
Even in food there would be no flavour.
What need to mention other things?

*I.e. could foretell the time of their own death.

217

The God of Death does not wait to ask whether your (composite) works are completed or not.
Therefore do to-morrow's work to-day,
And the evening's work in the morning.

218

So long as you are healthy and produce a harvest
Which is not ruined by the great hail of disease,
And so long as your intellect is in your work,
All this is the time for heeding religious doctrines.

219

What are wreaths of flowers to donkeys and cattle?
What is delicate food to quadrupedst and pigs?
Light to the blind or songs to the deaf?
Of what use is religious doctrine to fools?

*Lit. the animals which walk in a stooping position.

220

So long as one is not ambitious
For so long will one's accomplishments be great.

If great ambition be entertained in the mind
How can moral attainments be controlled?

221

So long as a man does not beg, even when the time comes,
For so long is he (styled) a glorious ascetic.
Brave, clever, of high rank and
Manly are the terms used (of a man until he begs).

222

The first inventor of anything,
How very wonderful (admirable) he is!
The water-mill having been made,
Can be managed even by a girl.

223

A sage's son may suitably die soon,
And a king's son suitably live for a long time.
For the hunter's son^{*} life and death are equally unsuitable, and for the saint's son equally convenient.

*It might also be read "seducer's son".

224

Then let that which exists in the beginning
For the purpose of increasing man's understanding,
Let the elegant classics be expounded by the man who understands the doctrines.

225

Words of the nature of elegant sayings
Should be collected as far as convenient.
For the temporary but supreme gift of words
Any price will be paid.

226

The student of science, the hero,
And every beautifully formed woman,
Wherever they go
Acquire great fame, there and then.

227

A scientist and a king
Are not to be compared in any way.

The king is esteemed in his own country.
The wise man is esteemed wherever he goes.

228

He who is handsome, youthful, accomplished,
And born of high caste, yet,
Like the flower of the violet-lac tree,
Does not look well when separated from his caste.

229

He who has a body but is devoid of learning,
Even though of good birth, what use is he?
In the world reverence (comes) from learning.
From lack of learning comes destruction.

230

If you desire ease, forsake learning.
If you desire learning, forsake ease.
How can the man at his ease acquire knowledge,
And how can the earnest student enjoy ease?

231

He who is no friend of knowledge
Will always be in misery
He who is a friend of knowledge
Will always obtain happiness.

232

What country is foreign to a sage?
Who is hostile to a pleasant speaker?
What load is heavy to a man in his own home?
What distance is long to the energetic?

233

Since he who gives has friends,
The summit of the king of mountains is not too high,
The earth's profundities are not too deep,
And even when sundered by the ocean it is not beyond (his reach).

234

The superior man who has learned from books (only),
And has not studied (things) from many standpoints,

Resembles a pregnant girl of loose morals.*

235

He who scorns the spiritual teacher (lit. Lama), who has given him even a single letter,
Will pass through a hundred dog-incarnations
And be reborn of low caste.

236

To whomsoever a single letter
Is given by a Lama as to a pupil,
Whatever he may hand over (in payment), there does, not exist sufficient wealth on the earth's surface to repay this.*

*The last two lines are obscure and the text is probably corrupt.

237

He who brings one up, he who imparts elegant (learning),
He who imparts science,
He who feeds one and gives fearlessness,
These five are declared to be like fathers.

238

The wife of a king or of a minister,
Likewise the wife of a friend,
A brother's wife, and one's own mother,
These five are declared to be like mothers.

239

Counsel (given to) fools
Excites but does not pacify them.
He who pours out milk for a snake
Is only increasing its venom.

240

The fool, who is really a two-footed brute,
Should be specially avoided,
For, like the unseen thorn,
The pain of his words hurts.

241

If a fool sees a fool

He is more refreshed by this than by sandalwood.
If he sees a learned man
He regards him as a parricide.

242

(As regards) benefiting the evil,
Whatever you may do they are not grateful;
But if you do even a small service to a holy man,
For this he is yours to command for life.

243

All the doings of fools are like ripples on water quickly effaced.
(The doings of) a holy man are like a carving on stone.
They may be small but they are permanent.

244

Though the evil man may speak sweetly,
Yet he is not to be trusted.
The peacock has a sweet note,
But for food it eats powerful poison.

245

Alas, the evil man and
Phlegm (mucous) are really alike.
By mildness they are excited
And by roughness (astringent) they are soothed.

246

An evil man, gold, a drum,
A wild horse, women and cloth
Are controlled by beating.
These are not vessels for elegant doings.

247

Association with the evil man is unbecoming.,
Whether he be pleasant or obnoxious.
As with a dog—it is unbecoming whether you play
With him or let him lick you.

248

Wildness is worse than a serpent.

A serpent's venom can be assuaged by drugs and spells,
Wildness is not to be assuaged by anything.

249

The sins of the unruly (undisciplined)
Leave their mark on the temperament.
Whosoever mixes with the unruly
Becomes even more unruly than they.

250

Even without noticing his father's conduct
The son imitates him.
From the kitaka tree
One does not get the kurura fruit.*

*The kitaka is a magic tree and the kurura a sour fruit.

251

If my father, mother, own brother
And wife imitate me
In whatever sin I commit,
It is as if they had committed it.

252

This earth, the mighty ocean
And the mountains are not a burden,
But he who is ungrateful
Is indeed a heavy burden.

253

He who stays in the society of those of good moral behaviour
Rejoices to benefit all evil spirits (elementals).
Although Yama is the destroyer,
Yet wise men praise him very much.

254

In the society of the clever, the disciplined,
The contented, and the truthful,
Imprisonment is a superior state.
The sovereignty of the unruly is not thus.

255

Intimacy in the society of the holy,

Conversation in the society of the learned,
And the friendship of the unselfish,*
These will cause no regrets.

*Not dry—without craving.

256

Although for a very long time
You may not perceive the misery (caused by sin) in this world and the other world,
Yet bring your mind into harmony with religion.

Although a thing may afford you mental enjoyment,
Yet, if the full fruition is to be injurious, how can it be right?
If anything upsets your health
How could it be right to eat such a sweet dish?

258

That which hurts but is profitable
Is drunk by the wise like medicine.
The result, attained afterwards,
Becomes in itself incomparable.

259

If a learned king summarises the meaning (of this book)
In the beginning, the middle and the end,
It will be found to be not otherwise (than stated).

260

When the ocean shall be no more
It may be crossed in the middle, so they say.
Whether holy men exist or not
We should not transgress the moral codes.
